RAINBOW TROUT

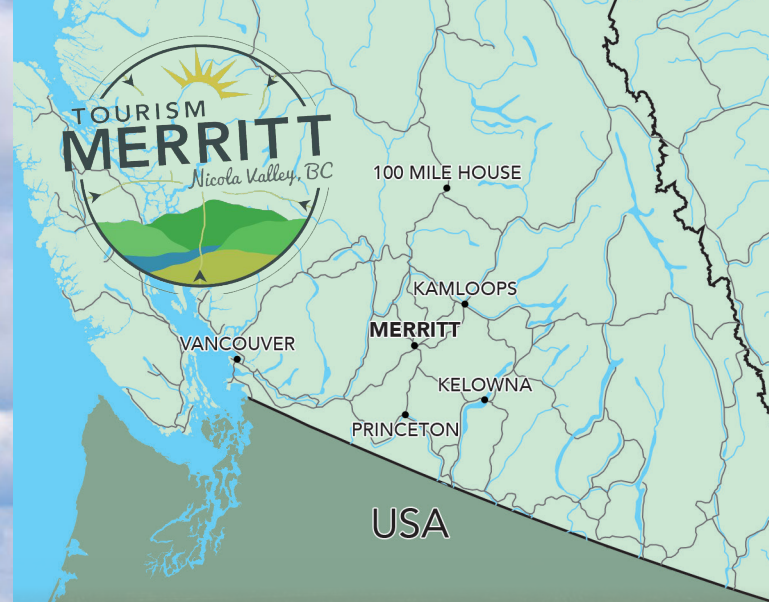

RAINBOW TROUT – The most popular fish in the area, rainbows can be found in most of the lakes on this list, and can be caught year-round. They often feed in 46-56 degree water, so will move into deeper, colder water in the summer months. Look for drop off points, as rainbow trout can often be found there. Popular during hard water season, they are usually found close to the bottom of the lake. Be sure to use brightly coloured spoons, chartreuse is a great choice. When using a fly rod try out a half-back nymph, doc spratley, and small leech patterns. Bruce from Gun Fishin' recommends chironomids and pumpkin heads. When fishing in the spring or fall trolling flatfish or lucky bugs works well.

BROOK TROUT

BROOK TROUT – Can be fished year-round, brook trout are most popular during fall and winter. During the summer, they become much more aggressive and are harder to locate. Moreover, when compared to rainbow trout, Ed from Ponderosa Sports says they are much more of a challenge and do not often bite easily. Small spinners work well with worms or natural occurring bugs. Try grasshoppers or mayflies.

MERRITT FISHING HOLES

Where locals often say, there is...

*A lake a day
as long as you stay.*

MERRITT SPECIES

BURBOT

BURBOT (LING COD)– Burbot tend to move around quite a bit throughout the day, making locating them an issue. Generally, they move closer to shore in the early morning and late evenings to feed, so this is the best time to fish for them. Keep in mind that many lakes in the area have a strict catch and release policy, so be sure to check the regulations before heading out on the water. Trolling along bays works well. Richard Jollimore from Wholesale Sports Kamloops recommends gang trolls with wedding bands, flat fish, and flashers or even squid and cod jigs. Fly fishing is a popular choice as well.

KOKANEE

KOKANEE – These fish are often the prey of rainbow trout and burbot, so they are generally found along the weeds or shoals, where they can hide. They are more active during heavy winds, as the waves act as camouflage. Reds and pinks are known to work well for kokanee as well as silver and green when paired with a wedding band. The best time to target kokanee is right after ice off, before the lake has turned over. These are a great fish to use a fly rod, as they often jump into the air while hooked. Bruce of Gun Fishin' recommends small nymph or chironomid patterns.
